A Statement from the City of Dayton

Re: Permit Fees

City staff have been working to determine the best way to eliminate barriers for people rebuilding or repairing homes damaged or destroyed by the Memorial Day tornadoes.

Tomorrow the Dayton City Commission is expected to vote and pass a resolution that will allow the City to waive demolition and other permit fees for homeowners and businesses affected.

Although there were no fatalities and relatively few injuries in Dayton, over 1,000 structures were affected and need some level of repair.
